Rudolf TAKAC
Project Management Association of Slovakia (SPPR)

Takac Rudolf was born in Košice, Slovak Republic, in 1964. In 1989, he was graduated from the Technical University, Košice, specialized in the Information Systems and Technology. Due to new market needs after 1990, he started learning Process and Project management. He applied obtained knowledge later on within his TOP management roles in the head office of the SOFTIP Plc., in 1995-2003, and the Novitech Plc., since 2003 onwards.

International Project Management Association (IPMA) certified his knowledge and experience across the whole scope of project management methodology in 2002.

Subsequently, he was nominated assessor of the IPMA certification process in Slovakia (2004) and became member of the Project Management Association in Slovakia (SPPR). Nowadays he is managing projects funded by the European Commission and several IT business projects. International environment of European projects calls for professional approach and use of appropriate project management skills and methodology.

Based on acquired experience he published editorials in international publications and Newsletters (Project Risk Management, Process and Project Management) and he cooperated also with Igor Travnik, professor of the Slovak Technical University in Bratislava, Slovakia, on release of the Project management syllabus.

Since February 2006, Rudolf Takac is the Director of the Slovak Institute for Project Management covering the IPMA certification process in Slovakia.
